

To find the line between these two subjects that have been trying to connect for years now, I have to first take a look at the two separately. To extract the possible connections as well as the opposing arguments in these separate subjects. Several studies show opposite results, a complete connection between the two (one does not exist without the other) as well as a complete disregard to a connection between creativity and 'insanity'.

These results show that this subject still is a work in progress, and that this question will remain to be asked perhaps without finding an definite answer but always with an opinion.

